

StirFry Seminars

October 2007

Recently I was asked to do a keynote and one hour workshop for Corning on how they could leverage their diversity learnings to compete in the global market. The response to the keynote and workshop was incredible and enthusiastically received. Many thought it was the best one they had ever attended, and others felt it was really needed and took them to the next level that they had been looking for.

Lee Mun Wah

“There are very few who have such a commitment to seeing and living in the truth of awareness and yet do not judge others. Lee Mun Wah is such a person. In a recent engagement with 140 of our senior employees many were captivated by the possibility of seeing themselves and their differences as a call to action to live more authentically and embrace the passion of their purpose on this planet fully. I believe Lee Mun Wah is a rare and exceptional teacher with a message that deserves attention. Many were touched by that message. I was clearly blessed to be present.”

“It is very rare that we as people are accepted for who we are. More often than not, we are judged on how well we conform to the criteria of the day. Conformity, being the path of least resistance, is often chosen by more than a few. There are those amongst us that have paid the cost of being ourselves and that price is high but worth it. For us, it is a rare occurrence to be affirmed for just being. Your training was just such an affirmation. It was a gift that I will never forget. Thank you.”

“What an amazing experience it was for me to witness the power of Lee Mun Wah’s teaching. He has the unique ability to transform his surroundings by sharing himself. Mun Wah creates a feeling of intimacy and a calm environment of caring and trust that encourages participants to interact openly and honestly. Our audience was fairly large, yet each individual felt personally connected. I am still receiving glowing remarks about the event, specifically his keynote address and workshop.”
